

Commute by Bike

Tips, news, reviews and safety for bike commuters

HOMEBEGINNER TIPSREVIEWSCOMMUTER BIKESCONTACTBUY GEAR

Portland

Bailey Works Messenger Bag

March 18th, 2006 by Moe

You've probably seen RL carrying his kids on this messenger bag, but how did it do on my commute to work?

Here's my first impression of the Bailey Works Messenger Bag:

When RL showed me the bag, I noticed the high quality of materials used right away. The bag looked like it can take some serious abuse.

I stuffed the bag with my clothes, magazines and my lunch bag. Everything fit and I still had room to spare. One of my concerns was that the bag was kind of heavy with all my stuff inside and it was going to be uncomfortable to ride. Once I strapped the bag on, I didn't notice the weight at all.

The front strap is really padded and the way the bag hangs on your body makes it super comfortable. You can forget that you have a bag of this size on your back.

I like riding to work with this bag. The Xootr Swift nor the Ibex X-ray have rear racks, this messenger bag is really convenient for my commute.

Stay tuned for my full review coming soon. Meanwhile visit Bailey Works new redesigned site at www.baileyworks.com

FREE

Bike to Work
Podcast

Click to Subscribe
in iTunes

Today Only
GET 50% OFF!
To Celebrate our 5 Year
Anniversary

